NEW CHEVELLE!
BY CHEVROLET

The kind of handling ease you'd expect in a smaller car. Come on down and drive it.

The kind of comfort you'd expect in a large interior. Come on down and sit in it.

Only a car that looks as good as this could come between Chevrolet and Chevy II. Come on down and stare at it.

New Chevelle Malibu Sport Coupe

Now—Chevy spirit in a new kind of car!

We built this one to do more than just stand around looking beautiful. Held its weight down in the 3,000-pound range. Then built four lusty engines—two sixes and two V8's—with output all the way up to 220 horses*! And if that makes you think this is one frisky car, you've got the right idea.

You've also got a roomy car here. Yet its 115-inch wheelbase keeps it highly maneuverable in traffic and very easy to park.

With its Full Coil suspension, it's got a ride that reminds you of the Jet-smooth kind the way it muffles noise and cushions bumps.

And the fine hand of Body by Fisher craftsmen shows up beneath this one's suave good looks, too.

Sound good? There's more. Like the fact that Chevelle comes in three series with eleven models—convertibles, sport coupes, sedans, wagons, even Super Sport models with front bucket seats. Like the fact that (and see if this isn't one of the nicest surprises of all) the new Chevelle comes at an easy-to-take price!

CHEVROLET

Like to hear more? The listening's wonderful at your Chevrolet dealer's—and so's the driving.

*Optional at extra cost

As History Records It

It was a true story.

A cold blustery morning in January a young man took the oath of office as Chief Executive of his nation. He was 43 years old.

Among at his side was his predecessor, a highly respected General of the Army who just 15 years before had been in command of his Country's forces when the Germans were defeated. The Chief Executive was a Roman Catholic who defeated his accession to office was greeting a party that lasted until dawn. The Chief Executive would rest only a few hours to a small minority.

Soon as he took office, this Chief Executive began to harass the big business interests of his nation by threats, ignoring the legislative bodies of the country, he sought to regulate all trade by executive order.

The constitutional government was ignored by executive decree.

He refused to satisfy the demands of the people to whom he owed his position. His Executive condoned mob violence and endorsed street demonstrations which inevitably led to mass arrests. The Government courts invariably ruled in favor of the mobs and their leaders were released for further and later unlawful activities.

Encouraged by his successes, the Chief Executive established direct communications with the Russian dictatorship and actively supported a non-aggression pact with his nation's enemies in the East — the Russian Communists.

This year was 1933.

The General was von Hindenburg.

The Chief Executive was Adolf Hitler!

Flunking The Future?

"ARE your children passing their tests, but flunking their future?" This saying has been on television many times. Did you ever think this could apply to our school?

Can our second have a really high standard if more than fifty per cent of a class is on the honor roll? Are there that many students who are above average? When you see a great number of students on the honor roll, you can't help wondering if the grading system in Plainview is too lenient. How can the system be changed? This would be up to teachers. They have to set the standard and the students must follow. Most students really would try harder if they knew they really had to work before they could receive A's. Even if they do not get A's, they should realize that a B is still above average.

When the students go on to college, they may not receive such high grades and may be very disappointed. Students have to learn what it is like to work in order to receive A's when they get in college. Do you think your child is flunking the future?

Victory

Lesson for November 10, 1963

Years ago the first wife of the famous Lord Russell wrote a book on the right to be happy. Much that she said could be taken to heart by Christians, but not all. For she had to face honestly the problem of death. It is not true that in the end death always wins? And if this is so, how can we be happy in the face of certain defeat at last? Mrs. Russell gave the only answer an unbeliever could give. True, death's triumph is assured, she admitted; so what we must do is to forget this and live as if it were not true. Can anything be sadder than that? Here is a person who wants to be happy, believes she has a right to be happy, but can be happy only by forgetting that real happiness ends in the grave.

The last enemy

There are persons within the Christian Church who are just as hopeless as that lady was. They will tell you it is possible to be Christian without any hope of life beyond death, that belief in such a life is no essential part of Christian faith. But they are wrong. Listen to the plain fact Mrs. Russell more honestly faced (for she did not pretend to be a Christian): Doesn't death end all? And if it does, don't you have to admit that all your hopes, dreams, accomplishments and ideals meet with final and hopeless defeat? If all the Christian can say is that death is the last enemy, the gate into Nowhere, then the Christian is no better off than the pagan. "If in this life only we have hope in Christ," St Paul says, "we are of all men most to be pitied." Everybody in the world people with religion, know the fact of death. They know the reason why death can be rightly called the last enemy: for no matter how many obstacles a man may surmount in the course of a long life, eventually death stands as the one obstacle he cannot surmount . . . That is as the pagan sees it. But the Christian view does not stop with the words "last enemy," but goes on: the last enemy to be destroyed is death.

We shall be changed

The Bible-teaching clearly that there is life beyond death. The Bible does not teach clearly what that life is like. Probably there are no words in our human dictionaries to describe it. One thing that is clear, however, is that the life beyond death, the life which those who belong to Christ share with him, is different from what we now experience. We shall be changed, Paul writes; and strains his vocabulary (in 1 Corinthians 15) to say how utterly different that life will be. Jesus spoke of it once as a life in which marrying is no more. Just as it is impossible to think of life as we know it without love and marriage at the very heart of it, so it is beyond our mental powers to say what it means, and will means, to live in a form of existence that Paul calls a "spiritual body," and that Christ calls being like angels. If this strains the imagination, and it really does, too much for us to grasp, we might remember that to be alive in this physical body is a miracle every minute, and if to be alive in a "changed" body seems a miracle even greater, we must remember how unlimited is the power of God.

Work without limit

Does a belief in the life everlasting cut the nerve of active Christian discipleship? No marck, famed and ruthless Prussian military man, said when defending himself against a charge of having wasted thousands of lives in a useless battle: "What's the difference? In 40 years all those men will be dead anyway." Does belief in immortality make us all, even Christians, indifferent to injustice, to human suffering and injustice? By no means; not for Jesus, and not for Paul. He ends his eloquent testimony to Life Eternal with a sentence beginning "Therefore, . . ." Therefore what? Let us then all sit down and wait for the golden chariot? Therefore let us think how happy we are going to be? No. His "therefore" (if you will look it up you will see for yourself) is a plea for firmness of character and for enthusiastic service of God. The light of heaven lights the common road, the common task.

Pastor Speaks

What is it that keeps one from becoming a cynic? critical, questioning the goodness of people's motives and actions? What was it that kept Jesus from becoming an embittered and hardened critic? If anyone ever had any reason to become critical it was our Lord. For from the outset of His ministry he was opposed on every hand. In the latter years of his life even the poor people lined up with those who were dedicated to get rid of him.

John 2:2 (Moffett Translation) says, "He (Jesus) required no evidence from anyone about human nature. Well did he know what was in human nature." When a man knows the human heart with its capacity for deception, hypocracy, and betrayal, he finds it difficult not to become critical. The "logical outgrowth of realism is cynicism" says Dr. Leonard Griffith of City Temple, London. Yet this did not happen to Jesus! Why? Because He loved people". He knew that was in people, yet he loved them just the same. Cynicism is an open survive in a loving heart, than germs in a sterilizer.

Jesus believed that people can change. We know that there is much human nature which is not desirable. Politicians are more interested in the elections than about the next generation of people. Labour leaders are more concerned with the desires of small groups than the expense of the whole community. International diplomacy is shot through with intrigue—all these tend to shrug off any accusation by saying "that's human nature". "There's nothing we can do. "But Jesus — and we can to — believed man's nature can be changed.

Christ also knew how to forgive. The cynic always carries a "zinc zinc chip" on his shoulder. We hear it said, "I have learned my lesson, I'll not trust anybody anymore! Expect nothing from people and you won't get hurt. Suppose Jesus had taken this attitude when He was in Gathsemane, how different things would be today! Jesus forgave; so must we! Peter asked one day, "how often must I forgive . . . seven times . . .?" "No, seventy times seven" replied Jesus. You and I must forgive until an attitude of forgiveness is implanted in our lives. Only the practice of Christian love will give one the ability to forgive like this.

Too, Jesus got so involved with the needs and interest of others that he could not become a cynic. We must not live in the ivory tower of cynicism. In our love for the Lord and our fellowman, we become "involved" in their joys and sorrows. It's a pretty dirty mess to behold at times, when we get into other people's anxieties. No, I don't mean meddling, but I do mean sympathy and understanding. We must not stand on the outside and look in, but move on the inside. The scholars call this "empathy". Get on the inside of the feelings and sufferings of others. It will give us a cool appraisal of the problems of others. We can see them as they seem them. We will achieve flexibility and generosity of spirit — like Jesus.

With the growing belief that people can change; with the developing of the forgiving spirit; and the willingness to get involved with the needs of others, will drive every cynical bone from our spiritual body.

The purpose of Christian worship: the practice of Christian stewardship and hearing the message of God from the Church each Sunday will "assist" us in developing this attitude.

My hope is that each reader will go to God's house every Sunday. Then practice the "art of loving people". This will balance cynicism with realism, and the results will be usefulness to God and to others.

Mr. W. Lloyd Vaughan
Times Virginian
Appomattox, Virginia
Dear Lloyd:

I was quite pleased to notice in the Times Virginian of October 31st, 1963, the large space devoted to Forest Fire Prevention and caused by twenty of your local merchants.

You have done quite a lot to promote conservation, and you and people to be careful with fire through your newspaper, and we consider this an excellent way to keep the people informed of the value of Forest Fire Prevention. This particular method that you used in the October 31st issue of your paper is most interesting, and I know will go a long way to encourage people to be careful with fire during this most dangerous time of year.

I have written to all of the sponsors thanking them for their interest, and for sponsoring this advertisement, I hope if we can be of any assistance to you or the newspaper, you will please let us know.

Very Truly yours,
